מרכז טש"ב • להדרכה בינלאומי חינוך ע"ש אהרן קנזי

"Only education has the power to sustainably change the behavior of societies, as required by the challenge of global warming." Director-General, Audrey Azoulay - UNESCO

In recent years, media attention has focused on the increasingly vocal demand from the world's youth, demanding leaders take just and equitable climate action and attitudes to address climate change through education.

As the world picks up speed in its race against climate change, education is a critical agent in addressing the issue to motivate all the schooling ages to act by empowering them with the knowledge, values, and attitudes needed to act as agents of change. Side by side with the OECD 2030 skills to apply future knowledge in the real world, including problem-solving, critical thinking, teamwork, coping with uncertainty, empathy, and negotiation, supported by innovative pedagogical methods that engage creativity to develop a strong personal connection to climate solutions, a sense of individual agency, and empowerment.

Climate change education is always multidisciplinary: in addition to serving as a climate protection strategy, it is also a strategy for promoting sustainable climate adaptation across entire social systems and lifestyle changes based on the principles of sustainable development.

There is a need to contextualize educators and school leadership with fundamental significance to learners within such theory of change, relevant learning, through projects aimed to accomplish social transformations required to address equitably, including poverty, responsible consumption, energy, mobility, social discrimination, and other human rights challenges exacerbated by climate change.
